The Barraclough Brothers
The Unfilmed Plans

Few material went unproduced in the world of comedy when it came to classic child trio The Barraclough Brothers (The best comedy trio anyone ever put together). These 3 brothers of English descent, but situated in the American mid-west, have been widely known for their TV show of the same name, in which 20 broadcast episodes were created from 2019 to 2020 in hopes of creating long-lasting laughs.

Although they ended just as quickly as they began due to technical difficulties in early 2020, accompanying the release of the complete series DVD that summer was knowledge of 2 unfilmed plans.

Although we may never see the final product of these, it is well-suited that they be named and written here.

1. The Planned Finale

Probably the most well-off of their plans, this final instalment to their season was written and ready, but Nick declined to do it, as he had seen the episode count and called it off. Who knows why?â€¦

The story, in full, goes like this; After calling off the plans to continue the comedy trio after the camera got some much-needed battery charging, Nick decided to call off the continuation of the reunion and future plans, and they had announced plans. They were supposed to go â€œon tourâ€ as the parents stated. As it stands, the episode went unproduced and remains a question of what could have been.

â€œNote: the planned finale was that Nick, Kaos and Edward would sit around on their normal chairs in the yard on a beautiful summer day. They would say goodbye and then clear the chairs. Then Nick would kick a soccer ball and hit Edward in the face. Kaos is jumping up and down, hyper. An on-location finale.â€

2. The Easter Holiday Special

Another unfilmed plan has been granted the light of day, and it is much more notoriousâ€¦ The story goes that the brothers were speculating their first holiday project, and this would take place in the coming weeks. April was â€œjust around the cornerâ€ at the time of the pitch, and they wanted to do something.

As it happens, this special is left to speculation of fans, and the only plot details confirmed was that â€œEdward would have dressed up as the Easter bunnyâ€. Aside from this,we are regretfully saying that no more details survive.

In conclusion, those three gentlemen, Nick, Kaos and Edward, have certainly done an outstanding job at their assignment, but one is only to speculate what else they could have doneâ€¦ Perhaps a curious and innovative mind will idealizes potential plot for them, but as it is now, and perhaps forever,these plans are lost.